

Kitchen Designer of the Year

project cost up to £30,000

Sponsored by

Louise Berry from Naked Kitchens (centre), winner of the Kitchen Designer of the Year: project cost up to £30,000 award. Host Steph McGovern (left) and Franke managing director Neil Clark (right).

WINNER

Louise Berry

Naked Kitchens

Location: London
Project cost: £26,000
Cost does not include installation or appliances

Brief: "The property is a modern four-storey townhouse and our clients, a young family, wanted something that no one had seen before combining sleek, minimalist, rich walnut cabinets with solid walnut and bespoke marble island."

What the judges said: "The kitchen is really functional and beautifully made. The working island was very well executed and the table is really, really nice. All this adds up to a highly developed, sophisticated design that you can really visualise as being used and enjoyed."

FINALISTS

Marcin Aniolek
Remeb UK

Location: Surrey

Project cost: £18,000

Cost does not include installation

Brief: "As an architect, our client had very high expectations and he set us a challenging brief. He wanted a fully bespoke kitchen with many details and finishes such as antique brass trims to all the finger pulls and a triangular drawer box."

Jason Bretherton
Stag Kitchens & Interiors

Location: Cheshire

Project cost: £19,200

Cost includes installation

Brief: "Inspired by many of the converted old buildings in Manchester, my client's brief was summed up with the phrase 'industrial vintage', a trend that seamlessly blends an old industrial look with chic modern living."

Alan Craighead
Craighead & Woolf

Location: Edinburgh

Project cost: £26,660

Cost includes installation

Brief: "My client was a lady who lives alone who doesn't like cooking! Although the house is Georgian, she wanted a contemporary kitchen with an individual character to match the interesting space."